A FINAL WORD.

Can the opposition to Colquitt defeat him for the gubernatorial nomination by supporting three other men? This is the question that concerns a great many of us right here on the eve of the primary. The Herald states frankly that it will be strange if we are able to do so. We have heard the supporters of Mr. Davidson and Mr. Johnson and many of Mr. Poindexter's supporters declare time and time again that they were and are for the man who can defeat Colquitt. There seems to be a very general agreement on the part of many of us to this, but unfortunately we have not been able to agree on who is the strongest man. Or at least we will not concede the fact. This is the last appeal the Herald will make to the voters in this campaign, because the hour of decision and action is at hand. We have studied the situation, have read the newspapers of Texas, written various people in different parts of the state, have watched the trend of sentiment and we honestly and candidly believe that the only man opposed to Mr. Colquitt who can possibly carry enough support to defeat Colquitt is the Hon. Cone Johnson. Johnson is already strong, we believe the strongest man in the race, and if the prohibition democrats of Texas who really want to see prohibition carried into effect will center on Johnson and give him their votes we will send Colquitt down in defeat together with all that he stands for in this campaign. We would not purposely try and deceive any voter in this matter, but what we write here we believe to be the truth and we are going to vote and work that way. Reports come from all over Texas that the prohibition vote is centering on Johnson. Shall we not join in this movement and help to make his nomination and election certain? Think this over carefully. It is Johnson or Colquitt, however much you might wish it otherwise. Do not throw your vote away and weaken a cause that you confess to have at heart.

AN OLD SLANDER BOBS UP.

The old slander to the effect that Cone Johnson in the past advocated that white women teach negro schools in the south has been revived again on the eve of tomorrow's primary. It was repeated in Palestine last night. This story has been denied so often, both by Mr. Johnson and his neighbors and friends, that it seems incredible that any man would be unfair enough to repeat it. The people of the Smith county community, where it was charged that Mr. Johnson made the speech charged against him, have declared under oath that he made no such statement nor any statement in the least suggesting such a thing. The people of Tyler know Johnson never made such a statement. Mr. Johnson has lived among that people for the last twenty-five years or more, has been neighbors in Tyler as you and your neighbor in Palestine; the people know him, know his daily life, and yet he has the solid support of his home people.

Here's the evidence:

Yesterday Tyler closed her business houses and went to Dallas on a special train of eight cars to say to Texas that Tyler and Smith county indorse and commend their neighbor. Every leading dry goods house, every grocery store, every bank, both of the newspapers, hundreds of the working people and farmers, closed their places of business and followed Johnson to Dallas.

More than this:

Every preacher in Tyler, including all denominations, indorse the private life of Cone Johnson, and are supporting him in this race.

Every member of the Tyler bar, the men who practice law at the same bar with Johnson, indorse him and are supporting him for governor. (The one exception is T. N. Jones.)

The Trades and Labor Council, composed of more than a dozen local unions, indorsed Johnson by unanimous vote and put the official seal of the council on the indorsement and sent it broadcast over the state, saying to the laboring men of Texas that this is our friend and our neighbor, a man as true as steel and as pure as gold.

The newspapers of Tyler and of Smith county, some five or six, are lined up solidly for Johnson, and declare him to be a citizen of whom Texas can be proud.

Almost without exception the merchants and bankers of Tyler are for Johnson, and commend him as a man worthy of all trust and confidence.

What more could you demand of a man than that he has the confidence and esteem and love of his neighbors? What better recommendation can he bring you? It is said that a prophet is not without honor save in his own home. But Johnson is honored at home and loved by those who know him best. He is clean, he is manly, he is brainy, he is big in many ways. You know that if Johnson had ever advocated that white women teach negro schools or any other such thing that his home people would not stand for him and by him.

But here's the evidence:

On tonight Oscar B. Colquitt goes to his home people in Kaufman county and will plead with them to support him in the primary. If they do it will be the first time. He knows it is necessary for him to make the plea of loyalty to a home man.

Judge Poindexter will go to his home in Johnson county, and tonight will plead with his home people to stand by him in this fight, even if they have faltered him repeatedly in the past. He needs to plead, for his county is divided badly.

General Davidson goes to Galveston, and Saturday will plead with his people for their support.

But Cone Johnson's friends say to him, Cone you need not come home only in time to vote. Stay out and work in other fields, for old Smith county guarantees you seventy-five or eighty per cent of her vote in the primary. So, Mr. Johnson has dates that will preclude his return to Tyler until 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Some of you, who do not know Johnson, say he is unstable, that he has no ability, that he has no standing. What are you going to do with the above evidence? How are you going to answer the indorsement of those who have known him for a quarter of a century? You cannot answer except you close your eyes and say I do not believe because I do not want to believe.

Tomorrow is the 23rd—significant, brethren. We swat the enemy.

The special session of the Thirty-first legislature gets down to work just after the primary. And some of the political brethren are wondering what will happen in a certain case. It is an interesting game to watch.

After the election the people of Palestine and Anderson county should start another campaign, this time for good roads and more farming population. One of these will help to get the other, and getting both the county will become rich and prosperous and happy. It is a campaign we need and one there are millions in.

When you cast your vote tomorrow for representative from this county vote for a man who agrees to abide by the platform of his party and vote as it directs that he shall on state issues. The question of submission will be voted on by the people tomorrow and if it is adopted by the people we want men in the legislature who will submit it. And we should take no chances. A man who says he will not abide by the platform of his party has no business in the party, and should not be considered.

VOTE FOR

East Texas is simply smothered with peaches. Not for years has such a crop been seen here. It is a shame they cannot be equally distributed over the country.—Palestine Herald.

Most of this state is amply supplied with peaches this year, and East Texas especially has a very large surplus for other states. But the Herald calls attention to an important fact in this connection that should attract the attention of the homeless man of this and other states when it says: "And the land that produces this wonderful fruit crop can still be bought for a song. The man up north where the heat is killing people every day should investigate East Texas, the land of abundance and cooling breezes."—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

THE HOME STRETCH

CANDIDATES FOR LEGISLATURE
AND FOR PRECINCT OFFICES
GREW ELOQUENT LAST NIGHT.
LARGE CROWD PRESENT.

The first of a double-header campaign rally for Palestine people, at which the county candidates are the chief performers, was held last night, and a great crowd of people were present. As announced by Chairman Fowler the speaking was held on the city lot just north of the city hall, and seats had been provided for a great crowd. Early in the evening some people stood up, but at the close seats were going begging with no takers.

The first speakers for the evening were the candidates for county commissioner for this precinct, and Messrs. Gore and Holmes made their announcements.

The candidates for justice of the peace made the next appearance, and all of them made good talks. In fact a prominent lawyer here commented to the Herald man that the local candidates were the best average speakers he ever heard in a campaign.

The constables followed, and all of these men made good addresses.

Next followed the tax assessors, and all of them got the glad hand more or less.

The real interest in the evening's debate centered in the race for representative. Mr. J. F. Nash was the first man introduced. He announced that he was for submission as a state democratic platform and would vote for it if the platform demanded it, regardless of the vote of the county. Mr. Nash favors a law keeping the natural waterways open to all the people, and favors a tax on large land owners to keep lands from being acquired in big tracts for the purpose of speculation.

Mr. J. E. Rose announced that he would vote for submission if his county instructed him to do so, and vote against it if told to by his county. He denied that it was a state demand, but insisted that the people of the county were the only ones who could instruct the legislator as to his vote. He favored a new juvenile law, etc.

Mr. Z. Broughton declared that he was in favor of submission, prohibition and for Cone Johnson for governor. He would be bound by the democratic state platform as to his vote on submission, as he believed a democrat could vote no other way and be a democrat. He favored good roads, and promised to use his best efforts in securing laws that would give us the use of the short term convict in making such roads. He pledged himself to use his best efforts in the interests of organized labor, and to be fair with all interests as he had to deal with them.

Following the speeches by the county candidates Messrs. Jno. F. Weeks, speaking for Poindexter; B. F. Rogers, speaking for Davidson, and Warren Moore, speaking for Colquitt, entertained the fragment of the big crowd which remained. The only incident of the evening of special interest was the objection of the crowd when Mr. Moore undertook some unfriendly criticism of Governor Campbell. The audience, and many of them were Colquitt men, absolutely refused to stand for it, and said so in vigorous language. The rest of the way Mr. Moore let Governor Campbell rest.

This evening at 8 o'clock the remainder of the county candidates will speak at the same place, and no doubt another large crowd will be present. The real interest of this evening's debate will be that of the county judge candidates. This contest has warmed up, and the platforms of at least two of the candidates are full of ginger and spice.

Also this evening Judge Felix J. McCord will make his announcement to this people.

This is the last night of the campaign, and you should get in the game.

Judge McMeans Here.

Judge S. A. McMeans and son, Howard, arrived in the city this morning, and the judge says he expects to visit his old home for about two weeks. Judge McMeans came just at this time to register his vote in tomorrow's primary. He does not hesitate to state his preference for the Hon. Cone Johnson. Judge McMeans looks to be in splendid health, and shows he is glad to be with his Palestine friends. This feeling is mutual. Mrs. McMeans is now in San Marcos, and will join the judge here later.
